

Maps show how redistricting reshapes Minnesota's political borders

Every legislative seat is up for re-election in a redistricting year, meaning control of state government is at stake in the fall election.

By Jeff Hargarten (<https://www.startribune.com/jeff-hargarten/6370579/>), Jessie Van Berkel (<https://www.startribune.com/jessie-van-berkel/6370530/>), Briana Bierschbach (<https://www.startribune.com/briana-bierschbach/6370434/>) and MaryJo Webster (<https://www.startribune.com/maryjo-webster/6370571/>) Star Tribune

FEBRUARY 15, 2022 — 5:44PM

(https://www.startribune.com/maryjo-webster.php?u=https%3A%2F%2Fwww.startribune.com%2Fhow-redistricting-reshaped-minnesotas-political-borders%2F600128883%2F&utm_source=facebook&utm_medium=social&utm_campaign=facebook)

Once every decade, the political boundaries of the state shift and help determine elections for the next 10 years.

It's called redistricting, and occurs after the census count (<https://www.startribune.com/minnesota-won-t-lose-eighth-congressional-seat-census-bureau-rules/600050299/>) to equally redistribute the state's